"It's during the last week of July, "Mandy said."That's the same time as the Hill County Fair."

"Yeah, that's true, "I said."But we always go to the fair."

"Tessa, you're the artist.But I'm not good at drawing, "she smiled.

"But you can learn, "I said in my most encouraging voice.

Mandy giggled."You sound like a TV advertisement."

Later, I called my friends Emily and Yoshiko, but both of them were going to the fair.

"What's this? "Mom asked.

"A leaflet for an art camp, "I explained.

"Would you like to attend? "Mom asked.

"Probably not, "I said."None of my friends are going."

Mom patted my back.She knew I had a hard time jumping into something with strangers around."Maybe next year."

"Maybe, "I sighed."I'm going outside to draw the Weston's pine（松树）."

"Dinner will be ready in an hour, "Mom reminded me.

I opened the door and looked at the bright sunshine as I sat on the front stoop.I thought about the art camp and wished I felt a little braver.Mandy could make friends with a whole bus of kids in 10 minutes, but my stomach twirls（转动）like a roller coaster when I don't know anyone around me.

Once I started drawing, I didn't notice the fly buzzing around me or the noise a few houses down.That's why I jumped when Mr.Weston said, "You've done a great job capturing（刻画）the strength of that tree on paper."

"Thanks, "I smiled.Mr.Weston was out for a walk.

"That pine was there when we moved in, "Mr.Weston said, "but I have planted pine trees before.You have to spread out the roots（根）near the surface so the tree can get enough water and grow tall.If you plant the root ball too deep, the tree dies.I learned that roots grow out, not down."

"That makes sense, "I said.

Mr.Weston nodded good - bye before continuing his walk.

I thought about what Mr.Weston told me as I looked at roots sticking out of the ground.I'd never realized how far a tree's roots stretched outward.It made me think about art camp and my own roots.I wasn't stretching them out at all.Instead, I was planting myself into one deep spot because it felt safer.I suddenly realized that if I wanted to grow, I had to start stretching my roots out into new earth too.

That night, I took a deep breath and made a decision. I am stretching my roots out into new earth so I can grow, I thought. _____

19. (8分) About 2000 years ago, Volcano Vesuvius erupted (火山喷发), destroying the Roman cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum. Now scientists are working to decode （破译） one of the great mysteries of that time - the scrolls of Herculaneum （赫库兰尼姆卷轴）.

In 1752, workers digging in Herculaneum discovered over 600 scrolls. Most of them were made from papyrus - a paper - like material. The heat from the volcano had burned the scrolls so much that they looked like chunks of charcoal （木炭块）. The scrolls were so fragile that just touching them could make them fall apart. So scientists have been looking for ways to read the scrolls without opening them.

Brent Seales, a computer scientist at the University of Kentucky has been working on this for over 20 years. He developed a method of using a CT scanner to take 3 D X - ray images of a papyrus scroll. In 2016, his team used this method to read a burned scroll found near the Dead Sea. But the scrolls from Herculaneum are much harder. This method didn't work well. Still, Dr. Seales hoped to decode them and trained an AI program. Though he was making progress, it was slow going. Then he met with two businessmen. They had the idea of holding a competition for decoding the scrolls.

The competition offered large prizes. About 1, 500 people have taken part in it. These people are sharing information as they make progress, so everyone can build on those ideas.

In August, 2023, Casey Handmer found a pattern that showed where the ink had been on the scrolls. Following his lead, Luke Farritor, a 21 - year - old student, created an AI program that found a whole word: "πορφύρεα" which means "purple". This was the first word ever read from these ancient scrolls.

Soon afterward, Youssef Nader used a different method to find the same word. For their efforts, Mr. Handmer and Mr. Nader each won $ 10, 000. Mr. Farritor won $ 40, 000.

Now people are working to earn the competition's $ 700, 000 top prize, which is for decoding four longer sections of the scroll.

"With all the recent progress, it's likely that someone will win this prize, too. For me, reading words from within the Herculaneum scrolls is like stepping onto the moon," Dr. Seales says. "Now it is time to explore."

（1）What does the underlined word "fragile" mean in paragraph 2? _____

- A. Easy to break.
- B. Easy to open.
- C. Hard to break.
- D. Hard to open.

（2）What can we learn about the scrolls of Herculaneum? _____

- A.They are difficult to read.
- B.They were once burned by fire.

(3) What does Dr.Seales think of the future of decoding the scrolls of Herculaneum? _____

- A.Difficult and impossible.

【解答】（1）考查名词。句意：父母问这个问题似乎是一个规矩。fact 事实；game 游戏；rule 规则；plan

（2）考查名词。句意：我不可能告诉他我考试又失败了。point 点；problem 问题；time 时间；way 方式。根据后文谈到摔跤，没有谈及考试再次失败，所以是没有告知。故选 D。

（3）考查动词。句意：当我们回到家时，他想说点什么，所以我决定改变话题。discuss 讨论；change 改变；forget 忘记；explain 解释。根据后文从摔跤的话题又到唱歌的事情上，所以是转换话题。故选 B。

（6）考查动词。句意：我想我即将到来的考试将会不及格。pass 通过；miss 错过；stop 停止；fail 失败。根据"Everything is going wrong"（一切都不对劲）可知认为自己会考试不及格。故选 D。

（7）考查动词。句意：哈桑是这么说的，但他并不意味着这样。avoid 避免；allow 允许；mean 意思是；mind 介意。根据"That's what Hassan says, but he doesn't"（哈桑是这么说的，但他没有）哈桑是这么说的，but 表示转折，不是意味着这样。故选 C。

（8）考查形容词。句意：感到害怕没关系。tired 劳累；scared 害怕的；relaxed 放松的；amazed 令人吃惊的。根据"when your fear..."（当你的恐惧...）可知前文是感到害怕。故选 B。

（9）考查动词。句意：但当你的恐惧告诉你你会失败时，你不必相信它。believe 相信；mention 提到；refuse 拒绝；prevent 阻止。根据"but that doesn't mean they are telling you the truth"但这并不意味着他们告诉你真相，所以是不必相信它。故选 A。

（10）考查动词。句意：你仍然是我的聪明男孩，在学校表现很好，只是碰巧度过了糟糕的一天。happened 发生；expected 期待；tried 尝试；chose 选择。but 表示转折，只是碰巧有了糟糕的一天。故选 A。

18.（6分）"Look at this, "I said to my friend Mandy, holding up the leaflet."There's an art camp at White Cliff."

"It's during the last week of July, "Mandy said."That's the same time as the Hill County Fair."

"Yeah, that's true, "I said."But we always go to the fair."

"Tessa, you're the artist. But I'm not good at drawing, "she smiled.

"But you can learn, "I said in my most encouraging voice.

Mandy giggled."You sound like a TV advertisement."

Later, I called my friends Emily and Yoshiko, but both of them were going to the fair.

"What's this? "Mom asked.

"A leaflet for an art camp, "I explained.

"Would you like to attend? "Mom asked.

"Probably not, "I said."None of my friends are going."

Mom patted my back. She knew I had a hard time jumping into something with strangers around. "Maybe next year."

"Maybe, "I sighed."I'm going outside to draw the Weston's pine（松树）."

"Dinner will be ready in an hour, "Mom reminded me.

I opened the door and looked at the bright sunshine as I sat on the front stoop. I thought about the art camp and wished I felt a little braver. Mandy could make friends with a whole bus of kids in 10 minutes, but my stomach twirls (转动) like a roller coaster when I don't know anyone around me.

Once I started drawing, I didn't notice the fly buzzing around me or the noise a few houses down. That's why I jumped when Mr. Weston said, "You've done a great job capturing (刻画) the strength of that tree on paper."

"Thanks," I smiled. Mr. Weston was out for a walk.

"That pine was there when we moved in," Mr. Weston said, "but I have planted pine trees before. You have to spread out the roots (根) near the surface so the tree can get enough water and grow tall. If you plant the root ball too deep, the tree dies. I learned that roots grow out, not down."

"That makes sense," I said.

Mr. Weston nodded good - bye before continuing his walk.

I thought about what Mr. Weston told me as I looked at roots sticking out of the ground. I'd never realized how far a tree's roots stretched outward. It made me think about art camp and my own roots. I wasn't stretching them out at all. Instead, I was planting myself into one deep spot because it felt safer. I suddenly realized that if I wanted to grow, I had to start stretching my roots out into new earth too.

That night, I took a deep breath and made a decision. I am stretching my roots out into new earth so I can grow, I thought. _____

(2) What can we infer from the story? B

- C. Tessa would follow her friends as usual.
- D. Mom encouraged Tessa to be herself.

(3) Which of the following sentences can be best put in _____? A

19. (8 分) About 2000 years ago, Volcano Vesuvius erupted (火山喷发), destroying the Roman cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum. Now scientists are working to decode (破译) one of the great mysteries of that time - the scrolls of Herculaneum (赫库兰尼姆卷轴).

In 1752, workers digging in Herculaneum discovered over 600 scrolls. Most of them were made from papyrus - a paper-like material. The heat from the volcano had burned the scrolls so much that they looked like chunks of charcoal (木炭块). The scrolls were so fragile that just touching them could make them fall apart. So scientists have been looking for ways to read the scrolls without opening them.

Brent Seales, a computer scientist at the University of Kentucky has been working on this for over 20 years. He developed a method of using a CT scanner to take 3 D X - ray images of a papyrus scroll. In 2016, his team used this method to read a burned scroll found near the Dead Sea. But the scrolls from Herculaneum are much harder. This method didn't work well. Still, Dr. Seales hoped to decode them and trained an AI program. Though he was making progress, it was slow going. Then he met with two businessmen. They had the idea of holding a competition for decoding the scrolls.

The competition offered large prizes. About 1, 500 people have taken part in it. These people are sharing information as they make progress, so everyone can build on those ideas.

In August, 2023, Casey Handmer found a pattern that showed where the ink had been on the scrolls. Following his lead, Luke Farritor, a 21 - year - old student, created an AI program that found a whole word: "πορφύρεα" which means "purple". This was the first word ever read from these ancient scrolls.

Soon afterward, Youssef Nader used a different method to find the same word. For their efforts, Mr. Handmer and Mr. Nader each won $ 10, 000. Mr. Farritor won $ 40, 000.

Now people are working to earn the competition's $ 700, 000 top prize, which is for decoding four longer sections of the scroll.

"With all the recent progress, it's likely that someone will win this prize, too. For me, reading words from within the Herculaneum scrolls is like stepping onto the moon," Dr. Seales says. "Now it is time to explore."

(1) What does the underlined word "fragile" mean in paragraph 2? A

- A. Easy to break.
- B. Easy to open.
- C. Hard to break.
- D. Hard to open.

(2) What can we learn about the scrolls of Herculaneum? B

- A. They are difficult to read.
- B. They were once burned by fire.
- C. They were made from papyrus.
- D. They were discovered near the Dead Sea.

(3) What does Dr. Seales think of the future of decoding the scrolls of Herculaneum? D

- A. Difficult and impossible.

B.Challenging and uncertain.

C.Difficult but meaningful.

D.Challenging but hopeful.

(4) The main purpose of this passage is to C.

A.show the discovery of the scrolls of Herculaneum

B.encourage readers to decode the scrolls of Herculaneum

C.introduce people's efforts to decode the scrolls of Herculaneum

D.tell readers the methods of decoding the scrolls of Herculaneum

36. (5 分) Have you ever noticed you feel happier after helping someone else? Volunteering isn't just great for the people you support, and it can bring you happiness too.

Volunteering means that you give your time, energy or skills to help others but don't expect others to give you anything back. There are more than one billion volunteers helping others all over the world, and there are lots of ways you can join them, including raising money for charity, helping in your local community, or even carrying a neighbour's shopping goods home.

According to Susan Albers, a psychologist, volunteering can reduce stress and make you feel better about your life. This is because being kind and doing things for other people activates（激活）the reward part of the brain and releases（释放）feel good chemicals like dopamine and serotonin. Albers says that volunteering has other benefits（益处）too, such as feeling part of a community, making friends and learning skills.

There are lots of ways you can volunteer. Albers recommends finding something that is meaningful to you. If you love sports, say, then ask if your club needs help like coaching younger players. If you're passionate about protecting the environment, organize a litter pick or beach clean. You could also ask at your local library, community center or school for volunteering opportunities（机会）. Before you start, remember to make sure you check with your parents. What's more, Albers says volunteering is an activity that everyone can do. You needn't have a lot of skills or spend much time.
