

英语答案

听力

1-5 ABCBA 6-10 ACBCA 11-15 CBACB 16-20 ACBBA

阅读

A: BBD B: CABC C: CDAD D: BCCA E: CDGEB

完形

41-45 ABDAC 46-50 CBDCA 51-55 BCDAB

单选

56-60 CBDDB 61-65 BDCAC 66-70 BDBAC

语法填空

71. the 72. named 73. symbolizing 74. will be used 75. and/while
76. proposals 77. to conduct 78. nearly 79. that/ which 80. in

写作

范文 1:

I had just rushed out when I found Aaron standing in my way. My heart missed a beat as I saw the serious look on his face. I feared he would scold me for not cleaning up the mess in time. "I'm sorry, Aaron. It won't happen again," I said in a low voice, hoping to ease his anger. He stared at me for a moment before speaking. "High-quality service comes first in the restaurant. Tidiness counts too. You need to check on every detail," he said firmly. A complicated mix of guilt, shame and determination surged inside me. I knew from the bottom of my heart I had to prove to him that I could handle every aspect of my part-time job. With all the dry rags, the beer lake was removed.

After cleaning up the mess, I reflected on Aaron's words. My face still burning with shame, I determined to make a change. By observing other workmates more attentively, I learnt how to do the dishes effectively and serve customers properly/appropriately. When clearing up the table, I made sure to double-check everything before leaving. To ensure excellent service, I also paid closer attention to the customers' needs and meet them as much as possible. Time ticking by, my efforts paid off. I proved to Aaron and my workmates that I grew into a reliable and responsible worker. Seeing customers' satisfied look, Aaron thumbed up at me, which filled my heart with great joy. Thanks to Aaron's demanding working rules, I was motivated to become a better person.

范文 2:

I had just rushed out when I found Aaron standing in my way. Seeing the dissatisfaction on his face, I was in low spirits. Lowering my head, I expected a harsh and merciless/cruel scolding. What I didn't expect was that he simply handed me another rag. "Use this," he said in a cold and serious tone. "And be more careful next time." I took the rag with shame and quickly returned to the mess. I worked hard, using all the rags to clean up the beer lake/ mess. My dedication paid off and the floor was spotless, shining in the light. As I finished the mess, I looked up, seeing a touch of approval in his eyes, which gave me a glimmer of hope for keeping my part-time job at the restaurant.

After cleaning up the mess, I reflected on Aaron's words. I realized that his strictness was not meant to belittle me but to help me grow and learn. His words about checking every detail rang in my ears, and I knew I had to be more attentive in the future. I also understood that mistakes were part of the learning process, but it was important to admit mistakes, take responsibility and correct mistakes. From that day on, I made a conscious effort to be more careful and focused on my work. It was really kind of beyond expectation that I started to enjoy the challenges that came with details. I was grateful to Aaron for teaching me such an important lesson.