Dear Tim,

I'm sorry to hear that you're so addicted to Tik Tok that you feel painful. I really understand how you feel. Therefore, I'd like to offer you some advice that I think may be helpful to you.

First of all, I recommend that you (should) develop some other nice hobbies, such as reading books, listening to music, or playing chess, etc, which will take your mind off Tik Tok. Secondly, you'd better make more friends through face-to-face communication. Thirdly, it's better for you to do some sports because sports can not only keep you healthy but also enrich your life and help you forget Tik Tok. Last but not least, you have to learn to control yourself and make good use of your time to work hard.

I hope these ideas can help you get rid of your addiction as soon as possible.

Best wishes!

Yours sincerely,

Li Hua

Suddenly, I heard myself asking, "Wow, how long have you been married?" Curious about the family, I asked directly. Hearing my less impolite question, the man answered kindly, "We have been together for fourteen years, and married twelve years." "Well then, how long have you been away?" I seemed to feel more curious. He replied with joyous smile on his face, "Two whole days! I feel as if I left for a whole year. I missed them so much."

I was shocked, as I imagined that he had been gone for several weeks at least. It's so amazing that the man and his wife have kept the deepest love to each other and passed the love to their children, which is the strongest weapon to any difficulty. The way the man treated his family was very rare around me. I could only say, "I hope that my marriage is still that passionate after twelve years." The man looked straight into my eyes and told me something that changed my life, "Don't hope, my friend, decide!"
