B

It is a good idea to give school trips to students. Many people know that students sometimes need to learn outside. Study and learning are not just reading books!

Some school trips make students see more about nature. The students visit many places such as zoos, mountains, forests, farms and so on. The teachers want the students to know about nature, to learn to love it and take care of it.

Some school trips are for students to learn about their cities. For example, they take students to some places of interest. Other school trips can help students know more about some different jobs. They take students to visit a police station or a fire station. These kinds of school trips help students learn about jobs, and help them to be thankful to the people who work for their city.

Students usually love school trips. They can go out of the classroom and have fun.

The teachers know that students can learn a lot when they relax and have fun. School trips can please both teachers and students!

C

Jack loves to read books very much. He reads all day. He reads at night. Jack’s books are here. Jack’s books are there. He cannot even find his chair. He cannot see which clothes to wear.

“That’s enough!” his mother says, “Clean up these books and get to bed!”

“Clean them up? But how? Right now? What should I do? How do I move them all from here? Should I put them behind the door? Should I put them under the bed? Oh, dear! I have no idea.”

“Wait! What is this book I see here? Hmm...How To Make A Library! I can organize (整理) by the writer’s name. That sounds like a real cool game! Organize them like the alphabet (字母表). That sounds easy. That’s no sweat! Or I can organize by title too. I know that’s what I will do now!” Jack becomes happy.

“All A titles I’ll put here. This is great! Now I see! Next will come B titles, and then C titles. This is really so much fun!”

Following these rules, Jack organizes them one by one. He groups them all from A to Z. He finishes the work quickly and happily. His mother is happy to see that. She never thinks he can really do it well.

“Books are great,” says Jack with a smile, “They help me make a library!”
